

Victorian Ships

John Ward was a self-taught artist, the son of a Master Mariner, who began his career apprenticed to a house and ship painter in Hull. Having completed his term by 1819, aged 21, he exhibited his first painting at the Royal Academy twelve years later. By the early 1840s, he had begun to explore printmaking to produce ship portraits of local vessels and to gather material for a Manual of Marine Painting. Marine Studies of British Merchant Vessels and Ten Views Illustrative of the Several Rates and Classes of Vessels in Her Majesty's Navy appeared as albums of lithographs bound in paper covers. They were; expressly executed as a work of information and instruction ... forming a Guide to Drawing for the purpose of Painting and the Marine Profession generally. John Ward did not live to complete his project. He died of cholera in Hull during the great epidemic of 1849. This book brings together Wards works on paper for the first time in order to realise his original aim. Gordon Bell, formerly Guest Curator at the Hull Maritime Museum and author of Northern Seascapes and Landscapes: Early Victorian Watercolours, Prints and Drawings began his career as a teacher of art in primary and secondary schools. His interests in education took him into a variety of posts in universities and colleges and was appointed Professor of Education in 1988. Arthur Credland MBE, was Curator of John Ward of Hull, Marine Painter, 1798 - 1849, an exhibition held at the Ferens Art Gallery in 1981 to commemorate the opening of the Humber Bridge. He is the author of Marine Painting in Hull over Three Centuries and Artists and Craftsmen of Hull and East Yorkshire. Until his retirement in 2008, he was Keeper of Hull Maritime Museum.

Victorian-era merchant ships of the United States includes all merchant ships built by the United States or which sailed under the flag of the United States during Victorian-era passenger ships of the United Kingdom include all passenger-carrying ships designed, built, or operated during the second half of the 19th century Victorian era merchant ships includes all merchant ships of the latter half of the 19th Century. Subcategories. This category has the following 5 subcategories, Pages in category Victorian-era ships of the line. The following 20 pages are in this category, out of 20 total. This list may not reflect recent changes (learn Pages in category Victorian-era naval ships of France. The following 13 pages are in this category, out of 13 total. This list may not reflect recent changes (learn HMS Victoria was the last British wooden first-rate three-decked ship of the line commissioned for sea service. With a displacement of 6,959 tons, she was the Victorian era passenger ships include all passenger-carrying ships designed, built, or operated during the latter half of the 19th Century. Victorian-era passenger ships of the United States include all passenger-carrying ships designed, built, or operated during the second half of the 19th century. Victorian-era merchant ships of Australia include merchant ships designed, built, or operated in Australia during the Victorian era (approximately 18). Victorian Era Ships and Boats Development. Britain has long been the leading maritime nation in the world. During the rule of Queen Victoria (1837 1901), the Pages in category Victorian-era naval ships. The following 2 pages are in this category, out of 2 total. This list may not reflect recent changes (learn more). Pages in category Victorian-era ships of Canada. This category contains only the following page. This list may not reflect recent changes (learn more). Pages in category Victorian-era naval ships of the United States. The following 3 pages are in this category, out of 3 total. This list may not reflect recent Victorian-era merchant ships of the United Kingdom include all merchant ships designed, built, or operated in the United Kingdom during the Victorian era Pages in category Victorian-era naval ships of Russia. The following 52 pages are in this category, out of 52 total. This list may not reflect recent changes (learn RMS Victorian was an ocean liner of the Allan Line, built for service between Britain and North America. The liner was launched in 1904 and was the first large civilian ship propelled Pages in category Victorian-era ships of Germany. The following 3 pages are in this category, out of 3 total. This list may not reflect recent changes (learn more) Victorian-era passenger ships of Germany include passenger-carrying ships designed, built, or operated in or by Germany during the Victorian era List of Ships of the Victorian Naval Forces, 1855 1901: Contents: Top 09 A B C D E F G H I J K L M N O P Q R S T U V W X Y Z