Love is often elusive, hard to find and even harder to hold on to. Caley Rogers knew that from a young age. When Joey Sanders walks into her life, she thinks she's finally found the love she has so desperately been seeking. Five years, a marriage, and a child later, Caley realizes her mistake. Trapped in a life with no love at all, she seeks out an old friend who quickly becomes her confidant. Ethan Blake has loved Caley for years. When she reenters his life one random night, he never expects more than friendship, but after weeks of secret meetings and listening to Caley's confessions of a loveless marriage, the unthinkable happens. Ethan and Caley finally share their true feelings for one another. Now, they must face the consequences of their emotions dealing with not only the uncertainty of their situation and Caley and Ethan's guilt, but also with the end of Caley's marriage to a man who isn't ready to let go. Love is more than just an emotion. It's more than a single word. To Caley and Ethan, it's everything.
