Whoneeds 20/20 vision to find true love?

Theres something familiar about the gorgeous woman across the crowded club. When he accidentally bumps into her, Alex Dean is shocked to discover what it is: The tall, leggy blonde is none other than Sadie Emerson, his college math tutor--and the subject of more fantasies than he could count. Years later, shes looking better than ever. He has to have her. Tonight. Immediately.Does it really matter that she thinks shes going home with his buddy, Alex Dare?Apparently it does. Because she sneaks away the morning after. Twice. First, when she discovers her mistake, then when she decides her upcoming more to New York makes them a two-day stand at best. But the sex is off-the-charts combustible, and Alex is already seeing stars, hearing bells...envisioning houses and picket fences and other things hed never considered.Now all he has to do is convince Sadie his feelings are real. His shy wallflower might consider him a daring mistake--but Alex has never been more certain.
