

No Such Thing As Perfect

College was supposed to be perfect. She was supposed to be perfect. For Lily Drummond, life is about following the rules. To be specific, her mother's rules. College fit into the plan—maintain perfect grades, date the perfect guy, and live the perfect life. On her own, though, Lily realizes that she doesn't actually have a plan. Without being told what to think and do, she keeps making mistakes. Away from home, the perfect facade is beginning to shatter. When Lily herself starts to break, it's the support of an unlikely friend that teaches her how much of a lie perfect really is and how to be whole on her own terms.
